And now a few words as to the Legisla-ture that is about to be elected. The last Legislature was not all that it should have another great young man in civil affairs. That which advanced the pretensions of Pitt, Clay, Webster, Breckinridge, and England since Pitt. None in New England since Webster, Banks alone excepted. None in the West except Breckinredge. As population in each of these lo-calities has increased, the effectiveness of public speaking as a means of dissemina-ting and enforcing opinions has decreased. The five thousand whom an orator addresses are but so many drops in the bucket that holds millions. The exaggeration that the pen is mightier than the sword, which was absurd enough when it was uttered, is be-ginning to be realized. It is certainly mignater than oratory, and the destroys he young man's best chance of advancement? If one's capacities are to be measured by his talent for excited declamation, precocious audacity and personal appearance, there is no reason why a lad of twenty-two or three or five freshness of youth on his side, and, as the tage over age and reflection. It is confidently expected that he project will be far advanced toward completion the coming fall. For prudential reasons the European termipus of the American cable is for, the present withheld; but it is perhaps worth while to mention that the consideration of suity, present and prospective, of any foreign government has entered into the calculation of the new projectors in the selection of a terminus. It is expected, indeed it is intended, that by constructing a direct line from New York city, and working it upon these improved plans, the Company will be mabled to do business at rates exactely, if at all, in advance of present rates on American land lines.
